

Climbing the Hill: A Safer Road Starts with Better Training

Established in 2022 by Kamran Rafizadeh-Ford, The Hills Driving School LLC. was created to address a growing demand for high-quality driver education in California. Drawing on a background as an aerospace technician, Mr. Rafizadeh-Ford brings a disciplined, detail-oriented approach to driver instruction—one rooted in safety, precision, and practical skill. His experience in a highly technical field shapes a curriculum designed to meet the evolving challenges of modern driving. In line with this forward-thinking philosophy, the school now offers specialized training in Tesla vehicles, equipping students with the knowledge and confidence to navigate the future of mobility.

Old-School Service, Future-Forward Tools

At The Hills Driving School, traditional values like patience, professionalism, and personalized instruction remain the foundation of the learning experience. While the vehicles have evolved, the emphasis on thoughtful, one-on-one teaching has not. With modern cars like Teslas becoming more common, it's essential to address the unique challenges they present. Though equipped with a suite of advanced safety features, a Tesla handles differently from a typical internal combustion engine (ICE) vehicle—primarily due to its significantly greater weight, often close to 1,000 pounds more. This added mass affects acceleration, braking, and cornering dynamics, requiring specific instruction to ensure safe, confident driving.

More Lessons, Safer Roads

Across California, billboards for accident attorneys dominate the roads—a reflection of a culture that reacts to crashes rather than preventing them. The Hills Driving School was founded to challenge that norm, with the belief that better training leads to fewer accidents, not just better lawsuits. By prioritizing education over litigation, there's an opportunity to shift public attention toward skill-building and proactive safety. Imagine roads lined with signs for driving schools instead of legal services—a future where preparation takes precedence, and learning is the first defense.

Bridging a Decade of Progress

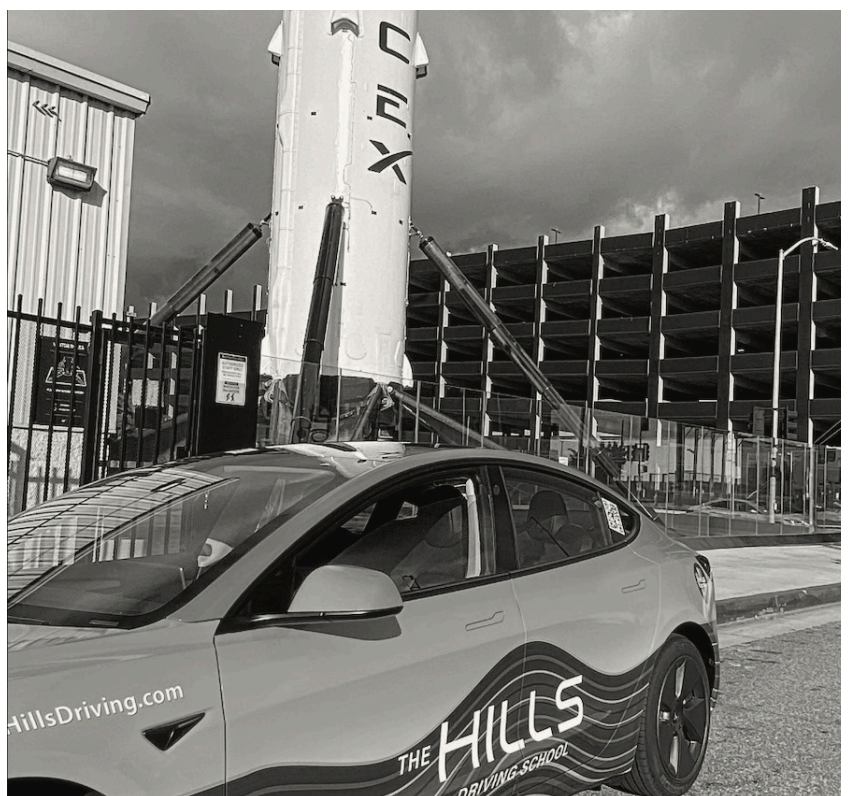

In 2016, while Kamran Rafizadeh-Ford was working at SpaceX, the Tesla Model 3 had already been unveiled—marking a turning point in the electric vehicle movement. Nearly a decade later, many driving schools have yet to evolve with this shift, continuing to focus solely on traditional gas-powered instruction. As EVs become increasingly common, there's a growing need for driver education that reflects the vehicles of today—and tomorrow.

Experienced Instructors, Diverse Training Options

At The Hills Driving School, we pride ourselves on having exceptional instructors who go beyond the basics of state certification. While we offer specialized Tesla lessons, we also provide expert training in traditional cars and hybrid vehicles, ensuring that all students are well-prepared for any driving situation. Our commitment to excellence means we continue to retrain our instructors even after they pass their state exams, keeping them updated with the latest teaching methods and driving trends. Whether you're looking for driving lessons in Los Angeles or seeking comprehensive training in electric, hybrid, or conventional vehicles, we deliver personalized, high-quality education that meets your unique needs.

Your Feedback Drives Us Forward

At The Hills Driving School, feedback from our students, families, and team members is essential to our growth and success. As we continue to improve our teen driving lessons, adult driver training, and behind-the-wheel programs, your suggestions help us refine every aspect of the learning experience. Whether it's about enhancing communication, introducing new training methods, or improving our lesson structure, your voice helps shape a safer, more effective path for every student. We encourage you to share your thoughts with us—whether by email, through our internal communication platform, or directly with our team. Together, we can ensure that every new driver is better prepared, more confident, and most importantly—safe on the road.
